MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Defendant Raynaldo Rivera ("defendant"), known online as "neuron" or "royal," awaits sentencing after pleading guilty to conspiracy to cause damage to a protected computer, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 371, 1030(a)(5)(A). Defendant's conviction arises out of his membership and participation in the computer hacking group known as "Lulz Security," or simply "LulzSec."¹ From approximately April to June 2011, LulzSec carried out a series of high profile cyber attacks against numerous corporate and government entities, crippling those entities' servers and stealing and publishing online the personal identifying information of thousands of individuals. LulzSec's stated goal was the "raw, uninterrupted, chaotic thrill of entertainment and anarchy," encouraging its followers to use the stolen information to "hijack" victims' online accounts, explaining that it "release[d] personal data so that equally evil people can entertain us with what they do with it."

Defendant, a college student studying computers in Arizona, joined LulzSec in approximately May 2011 and participated in its attack on Sony Pictures Entertainment ("Sony Pictures"), compromising its database server, obtaining and posting personal information for over 138,000 of its registered users, and causing losses of approximately $605,000 to Sony Pictures, including costs

1 associated with providing identity theft protection services to 2 those users.

3 The Probation Office has calculated defendant's advisory 4 sentencing guidelines range to be 46-57 months' imprisonment, based 5 on a total offense level of 23 and a criminal history category of I.
6 (PSR ¶ 96.) The government has no objection to those calculations.
7 After considering the sentencing factors set forth in 18 U.S.C.
8 § 3553(a), in light of the sentence imposed in the related case, 9 United States v. Cody Kretsinger, No. CR 11-848-JAK, the government 10 recommends that defendant be sentenced to 24 months' imprisonment;
11 3 years' supervised release; 12 months' home detention and 1,000
12 hours of community service (as conditions of supervised release); a 13 mandatory special assessment of $100; and restitution to Sony
14 Pictures in the amount of $605,663.67.²

15 II. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

16 A. BACKGROUND REGARDING LULZSEC

17 Starting in approximately April 2011, LulzSec, an offshoot of 18 the much larger and more nebulous hacker group known as "Anonymous," 19 went on a two-month rampage of cyber attacks against various 20 corporate and government entities in the United States and United 21

22 ² In Kretsinger, the government recommended a term of 23 incarceration of 30 months; the Court imposed a term of 12 months 24 and one day. The government's 24-month recommendation for defendant 25 takes into account the need to avoid sentencing disparities vis-à-26 vis Kretsinger, 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(6), and should not be 27 interpreted as an indication that the government believes defendant 28 deserves a lesser sentence than Kretsinger. Indeed, as explained in its supplemental sentencing position (filed under seal concurrently herewith), the government believes critical mitigating factors present in the Kretsinger case are not present here, and thus that Rivera should receive a sentence greater than that imposed on Kretsinger.

1 Kingdom, including, among others, the Public Broadcasting Service, 2 Fox Entertainment Group, Sony Pictures, FBI Infragard,³ the 3 Senatge.gov website, the Arizona Department of Public Safety, and 4 Britain's Serious Organized Crime Agency, or "SOCA."

5 Although membership in LulzSec was somewhat fluid, core members 6 included Hector Xavier Monsegur, also known as ("aka") "sabu," who 7 resided in New York, and a number of U.K. residents, including Ryan 8 Ackroyd, aka "kayla"; Jake Davis, aka "topiary"; Darren Martyn, aka 9 "pwnsauce"; and Donncha O'Cearrbhail, aka "palladium." Other 10 members included defendant, aka "neuron," and Cody Kretsinger, aka 11 "recursion," who were students together at the University of 12 Advancing Technology ("UAT") in Tempe, Arizona. Ryan Cleary, 13 another U.K. resident who controlled a massive botnet, was also 14 affiliated with the group and conducted many of its denial of 15 service attacks.⁴

16 LulzSec used a variety of methods to carry out its attacks, 17 including distributed denial of service (or "DDoS") attacks, 18 designed to cripple the targeted servers and render them

22 ³ InfraGard is a partnership between the FBI (and other state 23 and local law enforcement agencies) and the private sector, and is 24 dedicated to sharing information and intelligence regarding physical and cyber threats to critical infrastructure in the United States.

25 ⁴ All of these individuals have been or are currently being 26 prosecuted. Monsegur awaits sentencing in the Southern District of 27 New York ("SDNY"). Ackroyd, Davis, and Martyn have been charged in 28 both the U.K. and SDNY (along with O'Cearrbhail), and have pled guilty and been sentenced in the U.K. Cleary has been charged in both this district and the U.K. Defendant and Kretsinger were charged in this district, case nos. CR 12-798-JAK and CR 11-848-JAK, respectively.

1 inaccessible to legitimate users,⁵ as well as SQL injection attacks, 2 designed to steal information from the targeted servers, primarily 3 personal identifying information such as names, passwords, e-mail
4 addresses, home addresses, and phone numbers.⁶ LulzSec members 5 discussed and coordinated their attacks by communicating through 6 Internet Relay Chat ("IRC") servers hosted on various computers
7 throughout the world. To conceal their criminal activities, LulzSec 8 members used "proxy servers" to mask their true Internet Protocol 9 ("IP") addresses as well as software designed to securely erase 10 and/or encrypt their hard drives.⁷ Several LulzSec members, 11 including defendant, used a U.K.-based proxy service through which 12 they would first connect before carrying out attacks.

13

15 ⁵ In a DDoS attack, the attacker causes a large number of 16 computers (e.g., compromised computers in a "botnet") to flood the 17 target computer with large amounts of data or commands. As a 18 result, the victim computer is unable to handle legitimate network 19 traffic, and legitimate users are denied the services of the 20 computer. See http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Denial-of-

22 ⁶ "SQL," which stands for "Structured Query Language," is a 23 widely used database language designed to manage data in a database 24 and includes commands to extract, insert, update, and delete data.
25 In an SQL injection attack, the attacker includes portions of SQL 26 commands in the entry field of, say, a webpage form in an attempt to 27 get the website server to pass a newly formed rogue SQL command to 28 the database server for execution (e.g., to extract the database's contents and to send such contents to the attacker). See <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/SQL> and http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/ Sql_injection (last visited July 22, 2013).

29 ⁷ A "proxy server" is "a server . . . that acts as an 30 intermediary for requests from clients seeking resources from other 31 servers." See http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Proxy_server (last 32 visited July 22, 2013). There are many uses for proxy servers; one 33 of them is to "keep machines behind [the proxy server] anonymous," 34 i.e., logs reflecting access to the resource will show the IP 35 address of the proxy server, not that of the client seeking the 36 resource. Id.

1 LulzSec brazenly announced its attacks online via its @LulzSec 2 Twitter account, taunting its victims and rallying other hackers to 3 join operations such as "Operation Sony," "Operation Anti-Security," 4 and "Fuck FBI Friday." Through its Twitter account, LulzSec also 5 solicited input from the hacker community for new targets to attack 6 and posted links to information it had stolen and published online, 7 including on websites such as thepiratebay.org and LulzSec's own 8 website, lulzsecurity.com. Not only did LulzSec steal and publish 9 personal identifying information for thousands of individuals, it 10 exploited (and encouraged others to exploit) such information by 11 hacking into other online accounts maintained by those victims.⁸

12 On approximately June 7, 2011, the FBI apprehended LulzSec's de 13 facto leader, Monsegur. On June 21, 2011, U.K. authorities arrested 14 Cleary. On June 25, 2011, LulzSec released a final trove of stolen 15 data and announced that it would cease operations.

16 B. THE ATTACK ON SONY PICTURES

17 Defendant's classmate at UAT, Cody Kretsinger, who had known 18 "sabu" online for many years, joined LulzSec in approximately 19 April 2011. Kretsinger then successfully recruited defendant to 20 join.⁹ On approximately May 23, 2011, defendant purchased proxy

21 ⁸ For example, in late April 2011, LulzSec stole personal 22 identifying information from Fox's computer systems and used such 23 information to hack into and deface the LinkedIn accounts of 24 multiple Fox employees. LulzSec also encouraged other hackers to 25 similarly exploit such information, at one point tweeting that the information was "[g]ood for social engineering and phishing," two further forms of attack.

26 ⁹ Kretsinger recruited a second UAT classmate but that student 27 declined. Although this second classmate "idled" in LulzSec's IRC 28 chat rooms (i.e., watched LulzSec members communicate about the group's hacking activities without posting messages him/herself), the government has no evidence indicating that he/she engaged in any hacking activities.

1 services through a U.K. provider. Within a few days, starting at 2 least as early as May 27, 2011, LulzSec members began probing Sony 3 Pictures' computer systems for vulnerabilities that could be 4 exploited through a SQL injection attack. Once such vulnerabilities 5 were found, at the direction of "sabu," defendant, Kretsinger, and 6 other LulzSec members used a software program called "havij" to 7 execute an attack targeting Sony Pictures' database servers. They 8 carried out the attack for approximately four days (May 30, 2011, 9 through June 2, 2011) sending over 460,000 SQL commands designed to 10 "dump" Sony Pictures' database tables, i.e., extract the data they 11 contained, including personal identifying information (e.g., name, 12 address, dates of birth, e-mail address, and phone number).¹⁰ 13 During and after the attack, LulzSec mocked Sony, tweeting, for 14 example, "Let's just keep laughing at @Sony until The Lulz Boat 15 strikes" (May 25, 2011); "Hey @Sony, you know we're making off with 16 a bunch of your internal stuff right now" (May 31, 2011); 17 "Releasing some @Sony embarrassment in a few minutes" (June 2, 18 2011); "Everything we have will be published in multiple ways to 19

21 ¹⁰ Of the 460,000 queries, approximately 296,000 originated from 22 IP addresses associated with the proxy service that defendant and 23 Kretsinger were using (although other LulzSec members may have also 24 used that same service). (Ex. 1.) Approximately 97,000 of those 25 296,000 queries were traced through the proxy service directly to 26 Kretsinger, leaving approximately 199,000 queries. (Id.) Of those 27 199,000 queries, approximately 115,000 were executed using the havij 28 tool. (Id.) Although the government, unlike with Kretsinger, did not receive records that could trace those queries directly to defendant, and although the government acknowledges that other LulzSec members may have used the same proxy service and the same SQL injection tool (havij), based on the timing of defendant's use of the proxy service over the course of the attack on Sony Pictures (id.), the government submits that defendant is responsible for a substantial percentage of the SQL injection attack on the company.

1 ensure maximum embarrassment and exposure for @Sony and their 2 security flaws" (June 2, 2011).

3 All told, LulzSec obtained over 138,000 user profiles from Sony 4 Pictures. On approximately June 2, 2011, defendant sent the 5 information he had extracted to other members of LulzSec. Those 6 members then published the stolen information on the 7 lulzsecurity.com website and via the @LulzSec Twitter account, 8 thereby announcing the attack and making the information publicly 9 available to the world.

10 As a result of the attack, Sony Pictures suffered substantial 11 losses, paying approximately $605,000 to analyze and remediate the 12 attack, including $483,000 to computer forensics firms to analyze 13 the compromised servers, approximately $75,000 to staff call centers 14 to handle inquiries by victims whose data had been compromised, and 15 $47,500 to provide identity theft protection services to such 16 victims.

17 C. THE KRETSINGER CASE

18 On July 19, 2011, federal agents executed a search warrant at 19 Kretsinger's dorm room at UAT and seized various digital devices.
20 Kretsinger agreed to be interviewed and acknowledged knowing "sabu" 21 and other LulzSec members. After an initial denial, Kretsinger 22 admitted participating in the attack on Sony Pictures, using a proxy 23 service to try to hide his true IP address, and sending the 24 exfiltrated data to other LulzSec members to be published online.

25 A forensic analysis of the seized digital devices (as well as 26 others obtained during the investigation) revealed, among other 27 evidence, chat logs wherein LulzSec members discussed the group's 28 various attacks, including the attack against Sony Pictures.

1 Kretsinger was indicted on September 2, 2011, arrested in 2 Arizona on September 22, 2011, and made his initial appearance in 3 this district on October 17, 2011. On April 5, 2012, Kretsinger
4 pled guilty to the two-count indictment in that case. On April 18, 5 2013, this Court sentenced Kretsinger to 12 months and one day of 6 imprisonment, 12 months of home detention, 1,000 hours of community 7 service, and restitution in the amount of $605,663.67.

8 D. DEFENDANT'S INTERVIEW, ARREST, AND INDICTMENT

9 After the government determined that defendant was "neuron" of 10 LulzSec, federal agents interviewed defendant at his apartment near 11 UAT on the evening of April 2, 2012. Defendant acknowledged knowing 12 of LulzSec but adamantly -- and falsely -- denied any involvement 13 with the group and denied using the nickname "neuron." (Ex. 2.) At 14 the end of the interview, defendant agreed to arrange a meeting the 15 next morning between the agents and defendant's former roommate.
16 (Id.) The next morning, April 3, 2012, when the agents met 17 defendant and his former roommate, defendant agreed to answer some 18 additional questions. The agents showed defendant a chat log of him 19 and Kretsinger discussing the possibility of getting caught for 20 their participation in LulzSec. (Exs. 3, 6.) After seeing the chat 21 log, defendant admitted his involvement in the group and the attack 22 on Sony Pictures. (Ex. 3.) He stated that he had registered and 23 paid for a proxy service, that he used that service to conduct the 24 attack, and that, after the attack, he falsely told the provider 25 that his e-mail and PayPal accounts had been hacked and that someone 26 else had signed up for the service. (Id.; see also Ex. 4.)
27 Defendant also admitted developing a "brute force SSH" hacking tool 28

1 for LulzSec. (Ex. 3.)¹¹ Defendant claimed that after the Sony
2 Pictures attack, and particularly after the group started discussing 3 attacks against the FBI and other governmental agencies, he began 4 merely "idling" in the LulzSec IRC chat room and then eventually 5 stopped logging in at all. (This claim was false, or at best, an 6 attempt at minimization. Recovered logs show that a few days after 7 the Sony Pictures attack, defendant was still participating in 8 LulzSec's IRC chat rooms, telling "sabu" that he and another member 9 of the group were developing malicious software and asking "sabu" 10 how he could be of further assistance to the group. (Ex. 5 at RR-11 010067.)) Defendant estimated that he transitioned out of the group 12 in approximately August 2011.¹² (Ex. 3.)

13 On August 22, 2012, the grand jury returned the two-count 14 indictment in this case. Agents arrested defendant in Arizona a 15 week later, and he made his initial appearance in this district on 16 September 14, 2012. On October 11, 2012, pursuant to a written plea 17 agreement, defendant pled guilty to count one of the indictment, 18 conspiracy to cause damage to a protected computer, in violation of 19 18 U.S.C. §§ 371, 1030(a)(5)(A). (CR 26.)

22 ¹¹ SSH, short for "secure shell," "is a cryptographic network 23 protocol for secure data communication, remote command-line login, 24 remote command execution, and other secure network services between 25 two networked computers" See http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Secure_Shell (last visited July 22, 2013). A brute force tool is a 26 software program that tries to gain access to a resource by systematically checking all possible passwords or keys. See http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Brute-force_attack (last visited July 22, 2013).

27 ¹² Defendant's involvement with LulzSec, in fact, likely ended 28 earlier, around June 25, 2011, when the group posted its "farewell" message to the public.

1 III. THE ADVISORY SENTENCING GUIDELINES RANGE

2 A. DEFENDANT'S GUIDELINE CALCULATION

3 The government agrees with the advisory sentencing guidelines 4 calculations set forth in the presentence report, which are 5 summarized as follows:

6 Base Offense Level: 6 U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(a)(2)

7 Specific Offense
8 Characteristics:

9 Loss Amount: +14 U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(b)(1)(H)

10 Offense Involved
11 Sophisticated Means: +2 U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(b)(10)(c)

12 Re: Obtaining or 13 Disseminating
14 Personal Information: +2 U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(b)(16)

15 Adjustments:

16 Use of Special Skill: +2 U.S.S.G. § 3B1.3

17 Acceptance of 18 Responsibility: -3 U.S.S.G. § 3E1.1

19 Total Offense Level: 23

20 Criminal History Category: I

21 Advisory Guideline Range: 46-57 months

22 (PSR ¶¶ 34-63, 96.)¹³

23
24
25 ¹³ In the plea agreement, the parties stipulated to a four-level 26 enhancement under U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(b)(17)(A)(ii), relating to 27 convictions under 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(5)(A). (CR 26 at ¶ 13.)
28 Defendant, however, pled guilty to conspiracy to violate § 1030(a)(5)(A), not the underlying substantive offense. The Probation Office, therefore, has recommended not applying the enhancement, and the government does not object to its nonapplication in this case. (PSR ¶ 42.)

B. DISPUTED GUIDELINES PROVISIONS

Defendant argues against application of the two-level "sophisticated means" enhancement under U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(b)(10)(c), and further argues for a two- to three-level role reduction under U.S.S.G. § 3B1.2(b). Those same arguments were considered and rejected by the Court in the Kretsinger case, and they should again be rejected here.

1. The Offense Involved Sophisticated Means

Section 2B1.1(b)(10)(C) of the Sentencing Guidelines calls for a two-level enhancement if the offense involved "sophisticated means." The commentary explains that "sophisticated means" includes "especially complex or especially intricate offense conduct pertaining to the execution or concealment of an offense." U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(b)(10)(C), cmt. n.8(B).

The sophisticated means enhancement is appropriately applied in a hacking case such as this where defendant coordinated with other LulzSec members residing around the world to conduct an attack against Sony Pictures; used a specialized computer program, i.e., havij, which is normally used for penetration testing, to conduct a SQL injection attack against Sony Pictures' computer systems; executed the attack over approximately four days; stole personal identifying information for over 138,000 individuals from Sony Pictures' database; passed that information to other LulzSec members for public dissemination on LulzSec's website; and attempted to conceal his IP address by using a proxy service during the attack.

Defendant's criminal conduct was significantly more complex than that of the average unauthorized access case and thus falls squarely within the definition of § 2B1.1(b)(10)(C). See, e.g.,

1 United States v. Barrington, 648 F.3d 1178, 1199 (11th Cir. 2011)
2 (upholding application of sophisticated means enhancement where 3 defendant accessed protected computer at university to change 4 student grades; although "each step in the scheme was not 5 necessarily sophisticated," enhancement applicable because "the 6 hacking involved multiple, repetitive and coordinated steps to 7 deceive and exploit [the] protected system."); United States v.
8 Dinh, 2011 WL 1197666, at *3-*4 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2011) (applying 9 sophisticated means enhancement for defendant convicted of violation 10 of 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(5)(A) who accessed company's computer system 11 using administrator password and transferred currency).

12 2. Defendant Was Not a Minor Participant

13 A defendant may be entitled to a two-level reduction in offense 14 level if he was a "minor" participant in the criminal activity, or a 15 three-level reduction if he was somewhere between a "minor" and 16 "minimal" participant. U.S.S.G. § 3B1.2. The defendant must prove 17 he is entitled to such a reduction by a preponderance of the 18 evidence. United States v. Davis, 36 F.3d 1424, 1436 (9th Cir.
19 1994). "Just because a defendant may be less culpable than other 20 participants in an offense, he is not necessarily entitled to a 21 . . . role adjustment under section 3B1.2." Id. The Ninth Circuit 22 "has consistently stated that a downward adjustment under section 23 3B1.2 is to be used infrequently and only in exceptional 24 circumstances." Id.

25 Here, while other LulzSec members may be more culpable than 26 defendant in that they conducted other attacks not charged in this 27 case, as to the conspiracy to attack, and the actual attack on, Sony 28 Pictures (the only attack charged in this case), defendant played a

1 significant role and cannot be described as "substantially less 2 culpable than the average participant." U.S.S.G. § 3B1.3.
3 Defendant personally downloaded, installed, and configured havi j to 4 execute an attack on Sony Pictures database servers; ran the attack 5 over the course of approximately four days, helping exfiltrate 6 thousands of records; and transmitted those stolen records for 7 publication on LulzSec's website. That other LulzSec members 8 participated in the attack alongside defendant proves that 9 defendant's role cannot be considered "minor"; at best, he is on 10 equal footing with his co-conspirators.

11 As such, and as this Court found with respect to Kretsinger, 12 the Court should not apply any role reduction in calculating 13 defendant's offense level.

14 IV. ANALYSIS OF THE RELEVANT SENTENCING FACTORS UNDER 18 U.S.C.
15 § 3553(A)

16 The "overarching statutory charge" for sentencing courts is to 17 "impose a sentence sufficient, but not greater than necessary" to 18 satisfy the purposes of sentencing set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a).
19 United States v. Carty, 520 F.3d 984, 991 (9th Cir. 2008) (en banc) 20 (relying on Rita v. United States, 551 U.S. 338 (2007), Gall v.
21 United States, 552 U.S. 38 (2007), and Kimbrough v. United States, 22 552 U.S. 85 (2007)). The court must begin by correctly calculating 23 the applicable advisory guidelines range, which remains "the 24 starting point and the initial benchmark" and is "to be kept in mind 25 throughout the process." Id. The parties are then given a chance 26 to argue for a sentence they believe is appropriate in light of the 27 other § 3553(a) factors. The sentencing court must justify any 28 sentence outside the advisory guidelines range, with "a major

1 departure . . . supported by a more significant justification than a 2 minor one." Id. at 991-92. The sentencing court must explain the 3 final sentence "sufficiently to permit meaningful appellate review" 4 depending "upon the complexity of the particular case, whether the 5 sentence chosen is inside or outside the Guidelines, and the 6 strength and seriousness of the proffered reasons for imposing a 7 sentence that differs from the Guidelines range." Id.

8 The government respectfully recommends that the Court sentence 9 defendant to 24 months' imprisonment; 3 years' supervised release; 10 12 months' home detention and 1,000 hours of community service (as a 11 conditions of supervised release); a mandatory special assessment of 12 $100; and restitution to Sony Pictures in the amount of $605,663.67.
13 This proposed sentence reasonably reflects the sentencing factors 14 contained in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), including an analysis of 15 defendant's offense, his personal background, his respect for the 16 law, the need for deterrence and punishment, the role of the 17 advisory guidelines, and the sentence imposed on his co-conspirator, 18 Cody Kretsinger. (For the reasons discussed in the government's 19 supplemental sentencing position, filed under seal concurrently
20 herewith, the government believes a higher sentence is appropriate 21 for defendant.)

22 Weighing heavily against defendant at sentencing is the nature 23 and seriousness of his crime. Defendant knowingly joined and 24 participated in a sophisticated computer hacking group that went on 25 a concentrated, highly destructive, spree of cyber attacks. Cyber 26 crime is a huge and growing problem. Defendant claims that his 27 hacking activities were largely limited to the attack on Sony
28 Pictures, but he was a member of the group for much of its two-month

1 long spree, and chat logs show that he was also developing other 2 hacking tools for the group, attempting to obtain stolen Sony source 3 code, and trying to find vulnerabilities in other websites for the 4 group to exploit. (See, e.g., Ex. 5 at RR-010067, RR-010073 to RR-5 010074; see also Ex. 3 at RR-000085.) Even with respect to the Sony 6 Pictures attack, defendant attempts to minimize his role, repeatedly 7 claiming that it was for only 10-20 minutes. (CR 43 at 2, 4, 22.) 8 He further claims that he was responsible for only 77 of the 9 approximately 460,000 SQL injection queries. (Id. at 22.) But 10 login records from his proxy service provider show that he logged 11 into his proxy service account from an IP address at UAT 12 approximately eleven times during Sony Pictures attack and that 13 those logins occurred during the same time period that Sony
14 Pictures' servers received over 115,000 malicious SQL injection
15 queries associated with IP addresses that traced back to the proxy 16 service provider. (Ex. 1.)

17 Defendant argues that LulzSec's lack of profit motive can be 18 seen as mitigating in nature. But the destructiveness and 19 unprovoked maliciousness of its actions should cause alarm and 20 warrants a sentence sufficient to deter other potential computer 21 hackers from engaging in similar behavior. LulzSec members were not 22 serving, or attempting to serve, some greater good or purpose. They 23 were essentially anarchists who sought to inflict as much damage and 24 embarrassment as possible -- not only on the victim companies whose 25 servers they compromised and data they stole, but also on the 26 individuals whose sensitive personal identifying information they 27 published online, which LulzSec misused and encouraged others to 28 misuse. Indeed, the group's name ("Lulz," see n.1 supra) and its own words demonstrate its destructive and self-absorbed nature. The group unapologetically boasted about its attacks and the release of sensitive personal information, encouraging other, "equally evil people" to "hijack" accounts and wreak havoc on victims' online lives:

Yes, yes, there's always the argument that releasing everything in full is just as evil, what with accounts being stolen and abused, but welcome to 2011. . . . You find it funny to watch havoc unfold, and we find it funny to cause it. We release personal data so that equally evil people can entertain us with what they do with it.

Most of you reading this love the idea of wrecking someone else's online experience anonymously. It's appealing and unique, there are no two account hijackings that are the same, no two suddenly enraged girlfriends with the same expression when you admit to killing prostitutes from her boyfriend's recently stolen MSN account, and there's certainly no limit to the lulz lizardry that we all partake in on some level.

See <http://pastebin.com/HZtH523f> (copy of @LulzSec tweet posted June 17, 2011; last visited July 22, 2013.)

In the group's farewell message, after its 50-day rampage of attacks, it wrote:

For the past 50 days we've been disrupting and exposing corporations, governments, often the general population itself, and quite possibly everything in between, just because we could. All to selflessly entertain others -- vanity, fame, recognition, all of these things are shadowed by our desire for that which we all love. The raw, uninterrupted, chaotic thrill of entertainment and anarchy.

See <http://pastebin.com/1znEGmHa> (copy of LulzSec press release posted on or about June 25, 2011; last visited July 22, 2013.)

At various times, LulzSec, like other hacking groups, has claimed that it conducted cyber attacks merely to expose the security flaws of its victims' computer systems. That claim is a false justification -- and even if true, not a valid justification

1 -- for its actions. If fixing security flaws were LulzSec's goal, 2 it could have done so without inflicting such damage, without 3 knocking servers offline, without stealing and publishing sensitive 4 data online, without mocking its victims, and without encouraging 5 its followers to further exploit and "hijack" individuals' online
6 lives. Indeed, there is an entire industry of computer security 7 professionals, as well as numerous "white hat" hackers, who try to 8 identify and remediate vulnerabilities while minimizing, not causing 9 or exacerbating, damage.

10 The government acknowledges that defendant has now -- in 2013 11 -- demonstrated seemingly genuine remorse for his actions; but that 12 remorse comes nearly two years after the attack on Sony Pictures, 13 and only as the result of this criminal prosecution. Indeed, 14 shortly after the attack, defendant took steps to cover his tracks
15 by wiping his computer (Ex. 5 at 010059) and cancelling his proxy 16 service account, falsely telling the provider that his e-mail and 17 PayPal accounts had been hacked and that the hacker, not defendant, 18 had signed up for the service (Ex. 4). Chat logs reveal that 19 defendant also attempted to plant misinformation to protect his 20 identity, even amongst other LulzSec members, falsely claiming that 21 he was attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. (Ex. 5 22 at RR-010077; Ex 6 at 0534.) Even almost a year later, in 23 April 2012, as Kretsinger and other LulzSec members around the world 24 were being prosecuted, defendant, when confronted by law 25 enforcement, initially lied about being "neuron" and said he had no 26 involvement with the group. (Ex. 2.) Defendant's remorse, then, at 27 least before pleading guilty, seems largely connected to the regret 28 of being caught, not to his own realization concerning the

1 wrongfulness of his actions. Thus, while genuine now, defendant's 2 late-found remorse is of no different quality than that exhibited by 3 most defendants who have been convicted and face sentencing for 4 their crimes.

5 Moreover, while the government acknowledges that defendant, 6 following the attack on Sony Pictures, took a less active role in 7 LulzSec, defendant overreaches in suggesting that he affirmatively 8 rejected or disavowed the group. Indeed, even after "sabu" 9 mentioned that the group had "smacked the fbi today" (a reference to 10 LulzSec's attack on FBI Infragard on June 4, 2011), defendant 11 nevertheless continued to offer his assistance to the group -- for 12 example, telling "sabu" that he (defendant) and another member were 13 working on developing a "nice RAT" (remote access Trojan¹⁴) and 14 asking "sabu" if he could help in other ways. (Ex. 5 at RR-010058, 15 RR-010067.) In contrast to defendant's continued participation, 16 Kretsinger affirmatively withdrew from the group when he learned of 17 the FBI Infragard attack. (See Ex. 5 at RR-010058 (chat log in 18 which "sabu" notes that LulzSec had lost members, including 19 "recursion" (Kretsinger)).)

20 The government acknowledges, however, that certain mitigating 21 factors, particularly, defendant's background and personal history, 22 weigh in his favor at sentencing. Defendant is a first time, non-23 violent offender with no prior law enforcement contacts whatsoever 24 (although this factor is already taken into account via defendant's 25 criminal history category). Defendant has demonstrated that he is 26

27 ¹⁴ A "RAT" is malicious software that allows an attacker to gain 28 administrative access and control over a computer system, as if the attacker had physical access to the system.

1 intelligent and hardworking, and, as described in the Probation
2 Office's presentence report and recommendation letter, has overcome 3 a number of significant early obstacles in life.¹⁵ Importantly, 4 defendant's mother, stepfather, sister, and other members of his 5 community, including his current employer, have remained supportive 6 throughout these criminal proceedings. For these reasons, the 7 government considers defendant to present a relatively low risk of 8 recidivism.

9 Balancing the above considerations in light of the sentencing 10 factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), the government believes a 11 term of imprisonment of 24 months is appropriate.

12 V. CONCLUSION

13 For the foregoing reasons, the government respectfully requests 14 that the Court sentence defendant to 24 months' imprisonment;
15 3 years' supervised release; 12 months' home detention and 1,000
16 hours of community service (as conditions of supervised release); a 17 mandatory special assessment of $100; and restitution to Sony
18 Pictures in the amount of $605,663.67.

26 ¹⁵ The government has no independent information to support or 27 challenge much of the information contained in the presentence 28 report concerning defendant's background. (See, e.g., PSR ¶¶ 64-76.) For purposes of this sentencing position, however, the government will assume that such information is accurate.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of entry 07/09/2013

On July 3, 2013, SA Jensen D. Penalosa and I conducted an analysis of IP addresses identified by Sony Pictures as having conducted SQL injection queries against its servers from May 27, 2011, to June 4, 2011. The purpose of this analysis was to identify SQL injection queries traceable to RAYNALDO RIVERA through RIVERA's proxy service account with [REDACTED], a U.K.-based company controlled by [REDACTED]. The FBI was able to identify IP addresses associated with [REDACTED] through information from Internet Service Providers (ISPs) and records received in response to, Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) requests sent to the U.K.

An examination of Sony Pictures logs showed 296,512 SQL injection queries that originated from IP addresses associated with [REDACTED] during the relevant time period. Of those 296,512 queries, 97,378 have been traced to CODY KRETSINGER. Of the remaining 199,134 queries originating from IP addresses associated with [REDACTED], Sony Pictures logs show that 115,875 of them were conducted using the SQL injection tool Havij.

An analysis of [REDACTED] records show that RIVERA logged into his [REDACTED] account from an IP address assigned to the University of Advancing Technology (UAT) eleven times during the timeframe of May 23, 2011 at 09:38 to June 6, 2011 at 19:49. For every IP address that conducted SQL injection queries against Sony Pictures' servers, Sony Pictures provided a 'First' and 'Last' date and time stamp. These refer to the first and last recorded instances that the IP conducted queries. I examined the first and last date and time stamps for the [REDACTED] associated IP addresses' against the dates and times Rivera logged into his [REDACTED] account. Although [REDACTED] did not provide the length of time RIVERA was logged in, or the [REDACTED] proxy IP address he was assigned, the dates and times Sony Pictures recorded [REDACTED] associated IP addresses' conducting SQL queries, coincide with the dates and times that RIVERA was logged into his [REDACTED] account.

RAYNALDO RIVERA, residing at [REDACTED], cell phone [REDACTED], email [REDACTED] was interviewed by Agents at the aforementioned residence address. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing agents and the nature of the interview, RIVERA provided the following:

RIVERA said he was not NEURON. RIVERA had a good friend, CODY KRETSINGER, who was accused of being a member of Lulzsec reports said he used the nick RECURSION. RIVERA said he read some IRC logs on the Internet, but he didn't communicate with the group in IRC. RIVERA said he is a software developer and is known on the Internet as wildicv. RIVERA said he has not spoken to Lulzsec members. He said he only talked to KRETSINGER about network security, as both of them are students and worked on "root the box" together. RIVERA said he does not believe KRETSINGER was part of the group, and he still communicates with him. The two met at the University of Advancing Technology (UAT). He said he doesn't know everything about KRETSINGER, but being part of Lulzsec did not fit KRETSINGER's personality. RIVERA said he did not create fake dox or misleading information online. He said he was well known as wildicv and some people call him ROYAL and RJ and his parents call him RAYNO or RAYNAL.

RIVERA stated that he had never been in IRC when other individuals were discussing active attacks.

RIVERA said he followed the group on the hacker news and he uses reddit a lot. He is a white hat hacker and deals with osirus and the livindead. He said he communicates in irc.hack3r.com in #chat and #root.

RIVERA said KRETSINGER was accused of being part of Lulzsec because he was following the group.

RIVERA said he was telling the interviewing agents that he was being completely truthful. He is close to finishing school and employed at Cummings Engineering. He said he writes a lot of software. He said he wrote something for CCDC for red team and a brute force ssh tool.

RAYNALDO RIVERA, SSN [REDACTED], DOB [REDACTED], residing at [REDACTED], cell phone [REDACTED], email [REDACTED] was interviewed by Agents in the parking lot of Fry's Electronics, 2300 West Baseline Road, Tempe, AZ 85282. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing agents and the nature of the interview, RIVERA provided the following:

Agents advised RIVERA that he was not under arrest. Wildicv and Wild RJ are nicks he uses on the Internet, while Royal is his nickname. [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] are email addresses he uses. If agents were to serve a subpoena to Gmail for information regarding his [REDACTED] email, they would see that his name and address are on file with Gmail.

RIVERA was shown a document that had various chat logs between ROYAL and [REDACTED], Neuron, and an e-mail from [REDACTED] support to [REDACTED]

RIVERA acknowledged that he recognized the chats and e-mail, and asked the interviewing agents where they wanted him to start. He was told again that he was not going to be arrested.

While attending college, a good friend of his, CODY KRETSINGER, approached him and said there's something going on with a group and we'd like you to be a part of it. He asked what it was, and KRETSINGER said it's a group and we're going to be doing some sort of hacking. KRETSINGER wasn't specific but said it was going to be intense and he would learn a lot.

RIVERA joined them just as a programmer because he wanted to learn. He strictly writes software and wrote a brute force SSH tool for the group. Other than that, he idled in the chat room trying to talk to members of the group to learn. He said the chat room he communicated in was the same chat room as the one shown to him earlier. When asked if it was pure elite chatroom, he said yes. He acknowledged making contact with the nicks PWNSAUCE and SABU and that PWNSAUCE was another developer.

When KRETSINGER approached him about a year ago at school, KRETSINGER didn't say if he was in or out of the group. He just said that they would learn a lot. KRETSINGER didn't tell him who made the decision to allow or not allow people into the group, he just said that he got a phone call.

The group asked him to participate by dumping Sony logs. He doesn't remember if they were logs from Sony Pictures or Sony Online Entertainment. He dumped the logs by putting a string into a tool; the group told him what the tool was and where to get it but he no longer remembers what the tool was. The attack to dump the logs was not a DDOS attack but was some type of database attack on a URL.

After dumping the logs, he was just supposed to hand them to someone in the group. That someone wasn't SABU but could have been KAYLA; at this point he can't fully remember. After the posting of the compromised information from Sony on the Internet, the group talked about it in chat. They talked about how much they had and how much was posted. Besides himself, the entire group was asked to dump Sony logs.

After the Sony attack, he was not asked to do other attacks but just idled in chat. In private chats, some members gave him a hard time about idling but not participating, but he told them he was just a developer. While idling, he used his nick at the time, NEURON. At this point, RIVERA acknowledged that he participated in the Sony attack by dumping logs, and that it was wrong and against the law. When the group started talking about the FBI getting involved, he told members in the group that he didn't want to participate anymore.

RIVERA acknowledged using the VPN [REDACTED]; this was suggested by SABU. He paid for the service using his own PayPal account. He believes he used [REDACTED] for the Sony attack. At the time he used the VPN for the attack, he was at the University of Advancing Technology(UAT). He connected to Sony for the attack using the following method: his laptop->UAT Internet connection->[REDACTED]->Sony. He used [REDACTED] for a couple of weeks and cut off the service. He did not tell the truth to [REDACTED] when he claimed that his account got hacked.

After the Sony attack occurred, he didn't feel good about it. He was idling when the attack happened and after it happened, he decided that he was done with the group. He started to transition out of the group by idling. The group pushed him to stay in but he told them no and disconnected. He heard about the group attacking the FBI affiliated website and started to get out in August. He stated he was in the group for about two months. In addition to himself, he believes that KRETSINGER approached [REDACTED] to join the group. [REDACTED] idled in the chat for three to four days the dropped. He doesn't believe there are others who were approached from UAT, and didn't mention this to [REDACTED], his roommate. After hearing about the news about SABU, he has felt badly.

He believes he still has the laptop computer he used for the attack at home and would provide this to the Agents. Since the attack, he has done operating systems re-installs alternating between Windows and Unix, something he does all the time. He never did any wiping or re-formatting to hide the attack because he didn't believe there was any point to doing so.

Since speaking to the Agents the night before, he spoke to his parents and his boss, [REDACTED]. He told [REDACTED] that he had a visit from the FBI. RIVERA agreed to have the Agents come to his residence to provide the laptop computer and consent to search it.

 2011-06-04 15:11:57 <joepie91> and yes
 2011-06-04 15:12:03 <joepie91> but it will still be sort of traceable 2011-06-04 15:12:12 <joepie91> there's just an extra hop 2011-06-04 15:12:21 <joepie91> just make an extra one 2011-06-04 15:12:25 <joepie91> just for this transaction 2011-06-04 15:12:27 <Topiary> don't think you can do that 2011-06-04 15:12:39 <joepie91> in the normal client you can.. in fact it's recommended to make a new address for every transaction
 2011-06-04 15:13:04 <Topiary> okay well get him to donate to you, then you send to tflow, then tflow send to the lulzsec address 2011-06-04 15:13:04 <tflow> i can make one on the bitcoin client if you want 2011-06-04 15:13:20 <tflow> but if i send to lulzsec address 2011-06-04 15:13:26 <tflow> it will be traced back to him 2011-06-04 15:13:33 <joepie91> don't send to lulzsec address 2011-06-04 15:13:36 <joepie91> keep it apart 2011-06-04 15:13:54 <Topiary> okay sure then 2011-06-04 15:13:58 <Topiary> whatever he wants 2011-06-04 15:14:06 <Topiary> if it's 0.01 I will raeg

Additional Chat Logs with "WildICV"

The user "Cody" had eight additional logs stored between "wildicv" and "thebiggestgnome". These logs did not reference "recursion". They did indicate that "wildicv" might be a co-worker of Cody's. Mandiant provided these logs to the case agent separately from this report. Table 7 lists the metadata for the additional eight logs.

APPENDIX 3: RELEVANT IRC LOGS

Analysts located an IRC log in unallocated space on the drive. This appendix includes parts of the logs relevant to the user name "Recursion". Highlighted in the figures below are all lines where "Recursion" was the actor. Mandiant provided the complete log to the FBI as a separate document.
